

Original

Saturday, July 10th 5:14 PM

17 yrs

I am the product
Of the wool that livered hands devoutly weaved together into a quilt to warm the shoulders of those yet to grow, and those fully grown and departing

I am a product
Of the words you said,
Of the toxic language thrust upon my lips at a young age
I am the product of your abuse, your smiles, your ambition

My eyes
They see differently
I may be the product, but I am not a toy

I have no remorse

Try me

Renewed

Sunday, February 16th 7:32 PM

21 yrs

Am I the product
not of the mechanical punch of needle
against skin, no

but of patchworked hands, patient and perceiving?

Am I the product

of sore mistrust?
of frayed unsound engines
and forlorn smiles?

Am I the product

Of my father's words?
Of worn, threadbare conviction Tempered, toxic thrust upon my lips at a young age?

no.

Those smiles,
meer ambition
Those words,
Respoken.

I am not the product, no
I am more.

I am the whistled teeth
of great times, great space
Within the fabric that breathes
My face

My eyes I may be the product, but I am not a toy
They see differently I have no remorse
My mouth Try me
Can't but help to scream

Fingers poking through
The fabric of time
Unkempt, undelayed
Buried but resurfacing
Forcing itself to light
Am I a rip in the fabric ?

